

California Statewide Fire Summary

Tuesday, July 28, 2015

While most of California saw a rise in temperatures, firefighters across the State continued to make good progress on the 9 active large wildfires. Today 5,200 firefighters from CAL FIRE, US Forest Service, local fire departments and other federal agencies are on the frontlines of the active fires actively fighting them. Firefighters will once again be bracing today for hot temperatures, low humidity and gusty north winds. In fact a Red Flag Warning has been issued by the National Weather Service for elevated high fire danger for parts of upper northwest California due to low humidity and strong winds. This warning is expected to last through Wednesday morning.

With the high level of fire activity and the increase in hot and dry temperatures, CAL FIRE is urging everyone to be extra cautious outdoors. On hot and windy days it doesn't take much for a wildfire to spark so all residents and visitors are urged to be careful. One Less Spark, means One Less Wildfire.
