

California Statewide Fire Summary

Sunday, September 21, 2014

Today 6,700 CAL FIRE, local and federal firefighters remain on the frontlines of 6 major wildfires across California. Overnight firefighters contained the June Fire, which had been burning in Mono County since last Tuesday. Full containment is expected this weekend for the Courtney Fire in Madera County and the Meadow Fire in Yosemite National Park.

Temperatures across the State should be relatively mild with a chance of rain in parts of the higher elevation. Winds today are expected to be relatively calm. This will help firefighters in their efforts towards containing the current wildfires and should help reduce the fire danger level for new wildfires somewhat today.

Even with the cooler weather forecast CAL FIRE continues to urge all Californians to be prepared for wildfires in their area. Have an evacuation plan and know what you would take if a wildfire broke out in your area. Learn more at www.ReadyForWildfire.org.
