

California Statewide Fire Summary

Friday, September 26, 2014

Rainfall across Northern California aided firefighters in their efforts towards containment of the 3 remaining wildfires in California. Today approximately 8,100 firefighters remain on the frontlines. Cooler temperatures are likely for the next several days, but over the weekend a dry and warming trend is expected. The risk for wildfires will increase next week.

Despite the recent cooler temperatures, fire danger has not ended. Residents are asked to remain vigilant and to remember to evacuate early when a wildfire strikes. Learn more ways to be ready to "Go!" at www.ReadyForWildfire.org.
